PREFACE

A thought has struck me:—As I am about to enter on an “adventurous career” I will keep a journal.

MAJOR MARTIN McLEOD, 1836

IN THE FALL OF 1938, I began to read American diaries and journals in the Wisconsin Historical Society’s library, intending to use them for a study of the speech of the New England colonists. My guide was the invaluable, but sometimes inaccurate, bibliography by Mrs. Harriette M. Forbes, New England Diaries, 1602–1800 (Topsfield, Mass., 1923). As I read on, it became apparent that these astonishingly numerous diaries were of great value for many kinds of historian, and that many of them would interest the general reader. As Mrs. Forbes’s bibliography was both limited in scope and not always easily available (it was privately published in a very small edition), I decided to collect material for a bibliography that would be more comprehensive, covering all the states and going up to 1860, and would indicate the nature and value of the individual diaries. The present list is the result. For its limits and limitations I offer the following apologia.

As Mrs. Forbes’s bibliography so well indicates, diaries are prone to get published in the most divers forms and places, as separate books, in every kind of periodical, in family histories, biographies, town and county and state histories, in small private editions, and as public ventures. Guides to their existence are far from satisfactory; indices and lists of contents are all too apt to omit mention of the form, and such characteristic titles as “Forty Years on the Frontier,” or “How Many Miles to St. Jo?” give little hint that a diary is being published. Catalogues, publishers’ lists, even reviews, suffer from the same obscurantism. The only working method I have devised to collect diaries is to thumb through every available book that might be suspected of harboring a diary, relying upon the eye to catch the characteristic dates and shapes of the diary form. The practice has its defects; the more popular books are occasionally missing from the shelves when the searcher’s thumb arrives, his eye may not keep pace with his thumb, and even the greatest libraries are far from complete—especially in privately printed books. Recognizing these dangers, I scanned such book lists, bibliographies, and reviews as were likely to mention diaries, hoping thereby not to overlook the obvious. To catch as many of the smaller fish as possible, I cast nets in different seas, one a large general library, the others scholars' libraries or special libraries in different parts of the country. Mrs. Forbes had made her list on the basis of libraries in New England; to supplement it, I worked in the Wisconsin State Historical Society's Library, the libraries of the University of California at Los Angeles and Berkeley, the Bancroft Library at Berkeley, the Henry E. Huntington Library, San Marino, and the public library of the City of Los Angeles. A good many items for which I had references, but which were not in these libraries, were checked in the Harvard University Library, the Boston Public Library, and the Library of Congress.

In the course of examining the books in the historical, periodical, biographical, literary, religious, and genealogical sections of these libraries, I have probably missed a number of diaries; I trust that they are fewer than I fear they may be. The Wisconsin State Historical Society's library and the Los Angeles Public Library have extensive genealogical and biographical sections, but I imagine that many diaries have been published in genealogies, town and county histories, and biographies which I have not seen. Neither my courage nor my leisure would permit me to scan newspapers, and I have examined thoroughly only the more promising popular weeklies and monthlies. Completeness is not claimed for this list; but I should be very grateful for references to diaries I have missed.

One group of omissions calls for special notice. There are innumerable manuscript diaries, published and unpublished, in the libraries of historical, genealogical, and antiquarian societies, in city and university libraries, and in private hands. Mrs. Forbes records about five hundred unpublished diaries for New England alone, not including diaries begun after 1800. Wishing to achieve some sort of completeness and to describe only those diaries that I had actually examined, I decided to omit manuscript diaries altogether. This may have been short-sighted, but it is the normal practice of cataloguing, and a list of unpublished diaries may always be prepared to supplement this one.

It will be discovered that some documents which appear in other bibliographies as "journals" or "diaries" do not appear in this list. These words are often misused; many works which are called journals by their authors, editors, or commentators should be known by other names. Religious "journals" are generally autobiographies, travel "journals" are frequently travel narratives; a historian's day-by-day record, if written as history, is a chronicle. Books of clippings and quotations should be called commonplace books, not journals; and annals, memoirs, reminiscences, minutes, orderly books, muster rolls, ships' logs, and extracts from the letters of even the most persistent letter writers should not be styled diaries and journals. To keep these sheep free from wolves, I have had to reject many hundreds from this fold.

I understand a diary to be a day-by-day record of what interested the diarist, each day's record being self-contained and written shortly after the events occurred, the style being usually free from organized exposition. Between a "diary" and a "journal" I have generally made a conventional distinction, that a diary is written for personal reasons, and that a journal, although otherwise similar to a diary, is kept as part of a job; in practice, there is often little or no difference, for journals are rarely altogether impersonal, many official journals being filled with the private opinions and affairs of the writers. Entry to this list has been only through the gateway of this definition. To have let in the mis-called "journals" and "diaries" would have transformed the list into a bibliography of miscellaneous documents which could never have been complete, and to which almost any kind of contemporary document could have been admitted with equal logic. More significantly, it would have obscured the motive of the collection. I believe the diary to be a unique kind of writing; all other forms of writing envisage readers, and so are adapted to readers, by interpretation, order, simplification, rationalization, omission, addition, and the endless devices of exposition. Although many diaries, too, are written with readers in mind, they are in general the most immediate, truthful, and revealing documents available to the historian. A comparison of a diary with a narrative based upon it, or of letters and diaries on the same subjects, will quickly show the essential differences.

I have also restricted the scope of the list to the English-speaking world of America. I have admitted diaries written by immigrants and foreign visitors, provided they were written in English or have been translated into English, but I have not included the journals of French and Spanish explorers and missionaries outside the areas controlled by English-speaking Americans. American missionaries are not pursued beyond the present territory of the United States, but the diaries written by American laymen visiting foreign parts have been brought in. After struggling for some time to separate the Canadians and Americans in the Northeast, the old Northwest, and the Pacific Northwest, I decided that, for my purposes, it was more profitable, as well as easier, to include all Canadian diaries written in English. As none of the libraries in which I worked was particularly strong in Canadian material, I fear that I may have missed many Canadian diaries.

The list is restricted to diaries and journals that have been published completely or in substantial part. Many items listed by Mrs. Forbes are omitted from this list because they are merely cited or briefly quoted in historical studies or biographies, or were published only through extracts of vital statistics. Diaries published only in quotation have been admitted only when the quotations were adequate to establish some idea of the diaries as separate entities.

I have given a few biographical details of the diarists whenever such information was available without special research. It has usually been derived from the diaries themselves or editorial notes, the Library of Congress catalogue, the Dictionary of American Biography, Appleton's Cyclopaedia of Biography, or Mrs. Forbes's bibliography.

The dates of the diaries are given by months and years, as actually published; these sometimes differ from Mrs. Forbes's dates, which are often the dates of manuscripts. All dates have been given in New Style.

The description of the diary and the notes of contents are intended to give a rough characterization of the document and to indicate the chief subjects, places, and persons dealt with therein; and whenever it seemed worth while to do so, a word of evaluation has been added. These notes and comments are those of a general reader, not of a specialist in American history. It is hoped that the evaluations may indicate where the chaff and where the grain lie, but no exactness is claimed for such spot judgments, the standard being higher when many diaries of the same type exist, as, for example, the Gold Rush diaries or the Revolutionary diaries and journals. Where no evaluation is given, the implication is usually that the diary is dull or conventional. In noting contents, I have usually indicated my own special interests in literature and language, as well as the subjects of more general and historical interest. The frequent note, "interesting spellings," is intended to indicate a general linguistic significance, for informal spellings are often accompanied by informal locutions.

When a diary has been published more than once, the publications are arranged chronologically, the last being usually the best and most reliable unless otherwise noted. Where the texts are complicated, as for George Croghan's diaries, the best text is given first, followed by notes on variations, etc. A complete text, if one has been published, is noted first, separated from other complete texts by semicolons. Extracts then follow. The texts have not been carefully compared; nor has every edition or selection from the more popular diaries always been cited, especially for George Washington's, Samuel Sewall's, and the like. Offprints have not been included. Asterisks mark those texts which have not been examined, but which are described by one or more reliable authorities. In giving the sources, I have rarely mentioned the editors unless the diaries are published as separate books; for this injustice, the necessity of saving space must be blamed.

The diaries are arranged chronologically, by years, according to the date of the first entries as published. Diaries beginning in the same year are arranged under that year alphabetically by the diarists' names. The reader seeking diaries about particular events or periods is reminded that to get in a full crop he must begin searching several years before the date of his interest, since diaries often cover many years.

It is a pleasant duty to acknowledge here the chief of my obligations. In compiling the list, I have been greatly helped by Mrs. Forbes's bibliography; something over a quarter of the items in this list also appear in hers. Nearly all her entries have been checked, however, and new sources have often been added. I have also found very helpful Grace G. Griffin's annual bibliographies published by the American Historical Association, Dr. W. S. Thomas's list of American Revolutionary diaries published in the Bulletin of the New York Historical Society, Volumes VI and VII, the bibliographies in the Dictionary of American Biography, Sabin's and Evans's bibliographies of American books, and Henry R. Wagner's The Plains and the Rockies (1937).

In compiling the list, I was fortunate enough to enlist the help of Mr. Roy Harvey Pearce, my friend and former student, now of Johns Hopkins. In the summers of 1941 and 1942 he spent long weeks checking entries, and finding some new items, in the Henry E. Huntington Library, the library of the University of California at Los Angeles, and the Los Angeles Public Library. The list owes much to his remarkable energy and care. I am also indebted and obliged to Mr. Thomas Wiener and Mr. N. H. Sand, who checked various items in libraries in Boston, Cambridge, and Washington; and to Dr. Louis B. Wright, Dr. Louis Koontz, and Dixon Wecter, who have all given advice at needed times. To Mr. Harold A. Small, Editor of the University of California Press, and his assistants, I am greatly indebted for the skill and care with which they saw the list through the press.

To the Regents of the University of California I tender my grateful thanks for generous research grants which made possible assistance in checking the list.

With genuine pleasure, I offer this list as a tribute of regard to my good friends Miles L. Hanley and the late William Ellery Leonard of the University of Wisconsin, and to the librarians in Wisconsin and California. The first set going and fanned my interest in the diaries, the second shared it, and the librarians made its gratification pleasant and easy.

AMERICAN DIARIES

HIGGINSON, Rev. Francis (1588-1630) of Notts, Eng., and Salem, Mass.

Sea diary, April-May 1629; day-by-day narrative of voyage of fleet from England to New England; adventures at sea; God's providences, and description of New England; fairly good narrative.

Alexander Young, Chronicles of the First Planters (Boston, 1846) 213-238; Massachusetts Hist. Soc. Proc. LXII (1928-1929) 283-299.

1630

WINTHROP, John (1588-1649) of Boston, governor.

Historical journal, March 1630-January 1649; known as his "History of New England"; impersonal daily record of public events.

Originally published as A Journal of the Transactions and Occurrences in the Settlement of Massachusetts (Hartford, 1790) 364 pp.; republished with additional material as, James Savage (ed.), The History of New England from 1630 to 1649 (Boston, 1825-1826); the best edition is that edited by J. K. Hosmer (New York, 1908) two vols. The first year (March 1630-March 1631) is corrected, supplementary to Hosmer's edition, in Massachusetts Hist. Soc. Proc. LXII (1928-1929) 325-361.

EASTON, Peter (1622-1694) of Newport, R. I.

Private diary, 1631-1678; notes about his family and settlement in New England, and brief notes of events in Newport history.

Newport Mercury, December 26, 1857, and January 2, 1858; some Rhode Island items in Rhode Island Hist. Soc. Colls. XI (1918) 78-80.

CURLER, Arent van (d. 1667) of Rensselaerwyck colony.

Travel diary, December 1634-January 1635; early journey among Iroquois Indians; personal notes and descriptions of Indian customs and vocabulary; fairly good narrative, and valuable as first account of the Iroquois. Translated from the Dutch.

Edited by J. G. Wilson, Ann. Rep. Amer. Hist. Assoc. (1895) 81-101.

HULL, John (1624-1683) of Market Harborough, Eng., and Boston.

1. Public journal, 1634-October 1681; notes of "publick occurrences."

Trans. and Colls. Amer. Antiq. Soc. III (1857) 167-265. Extract in Proc. Amer. Antiq. Soc. (April 1856) 14-15.

2. Personal diary, November 1647-March 1682; examples of God's providence toward New England and himself; typical religious diary, with some personal and weather notes, and items about the Dutch and the Quakers; fair.

Trans. and Colls. Amer. Antiq. Soc. III (1857) 141-164.

[VAN DEN BOGAERT, Harmen Meyndertsz, surgeon.]

Travel journal, December 1634-January 1635; journey from Fort Orange into the Mohawk country; Mohawk vocabulary. Translated from the Dutch.

John F. Jameson (ed.), Narratives of New Netherland (New York, 1909) 137-162.

1635

HOBART, Rev. Peter (1604-1679) of Hingham, Mass.

Clergyman's diary, June 1635-December 1678; scattered entries of births, marriages, and deaths; some war items, massacres, etc.

Diary of William Bentley (Salem, 1911) III 282-284.

MATHER, Richard (1596-1669) of Lowton, Warwickshire, and Dorchester, Mass.

Sea diary, April-August 1635; voyage to New England; narrative in day-by-day form of life at sea, storms, hardships, etc.; good narrative.

Alexander Young, Chronicles of the First Planters (Boston, 1846) 445-481; Dorchester Antiq. and Hist. Soc. Colls. III (1850) 5-34.

1638

DE VRIES, David Peterson (fl. 1618-1655) of New Netherland, merchant skipper.

Diary, December 1638-1642; life in New Netherland; interesting but narrative type.

Old South Leaflets VII No. 168, 20 pp. (from his Short Historical and Journal Notes).

1639

BUTLER, Nathaniel, governor of Providence Island.

Journal, February-March 1639 (extracts); "diary of my present employment," dealing with privateers off New England coast.

John F. Jameson, Privateering and Piracy in the Colonial Period (New York, 1923) 3-8.

1640

SHEPARD, Rev. Thomas (1605-1649) of Cambridge, Mass.

Religious diary, November 1640-March 1644; religious experiences and self-analysis.

Three Valuable Pieces (Boston, 1747) Part III.

1641

DE HOOGES, Antony.

Travel journal, July-November 1641; from Holland to New Netherland; a passenger's logbook; statistics. Translated from the Dutch.

A. J. F. Van Laer (ed.), Van Rensselaer Bowier Manuscripts (Albany, 1908) 580-603.

1643

ELIOT, Rev. John (1604-1690) of Roxbury, Mass.

Clergyman's journal, March 1643-April 1677; mostly church records and notes of outstanding yearly events; weather, Indian affairs, etc. Narrative type.

New England Hist. Geneal. Reg. XXXV (1881) 21-24, 241-247.

1645

WINTHROP, John (1606-1676) of Boston.

Travel diary, November-December 1645; trip from Boston to Nameaug via Springfield and Hartford, and back along coast through Providence; brief notes of stages, travel difficulties, weather, visits. Mostly in Latin.

Massachusetts Hist. Soc. Proc. 2d Ser. VIII (1892-1894) 4-12. Extracts translated, with editorial interpolations, in New England Quar. XIII (1940) 494-510.

1649

DANFORTH, Rev. Samuel (1626-1674) of Roxbury, Mass.

Clergyman's journal, March 1649-July 1674; affairs of First Church in Roxbury, local affairs, weather, etc.

New England Hist. Geneal. Reg. XXXIV (1880) 85-89, 162-166, 297-301, 359-363.

1650

BLAND, Edward (d. 1653) of Kimages, Va.

Travel diary, August-September 1650; long entries of a week of travel in the country and rivers behind Fort Henry, Va.; fairly good descriptions.

Published as The Discovery of New Brittain (London, 1651) 16 pp.; reprinted in C. W. Alvord and L. Bidgood, The First Explorations of the Trans-Allegheny Region by the Virginians (Cleveland, 1912) 114-130.

JEFFERAY, William (1591-1675) of Chiddingly, Eng., and Newport, R.I.

Private diary, 1650-January 1669 (preceded by autobiographical notes); a fake diary of the life of an actual inhabitant of Providence, recently written.

John O. Austin, The Journal of William Jefferay (Providence, 1899) 189 pp.

1653

FLYNT, Rev. Josiah (1645-1680) of Dorchester, Mass.

Clergyman's journal, October 1653-November 1674; a few brief entries, mostly about church affairs and troubles with the deacon.

Dedham Hist. Reg. X (1899) 19-25.

MINOR, Thomas (1608-1690) of Stonington, Conn.

Private diary, November 1653-July 1684; brief notes of personal matters, farming, and local affairs; some linguistic interest.

The Diary of Thomas Minor (New London, 1899) 221 pp.

NUTON, Capt. Brian.

1656

Travel diary, December 1656-January 1657; from New Amsterdam to Eastchester; brief description of a four days' trip. Translated from the Dutch.

E. B. O'Callaghan, Doc. Hist. State New York III (1850) 557-559.

ANON.

1659

Slave-ship journal, March-November 1659; scattered entries from business journal of the slaver "St. John." Translated from the Dutch.

E. B. O'Callaghan (ed.), Voyages of the Slavers St. John and Arms of Amsterdam (Albany, 1867) 1-9.

HERRMAN (or Heermans), Augustine.

Dutch diplomatic journal, September-October 1659; "touching the pretensions set up by Colonel Nathaniel Utie to the South River"; journey from New Amstel to South River; negotiations. Translated.

E. B. O'Callaghan, Docs. Rel. Col. Hist. State New York II (1858) 88-98; revised translation in Clayton C. Hall (ed.), Narratives of Early Maryland (Original Narratives of Early American History) (New York, 1910) 311-333.

WIGGLESWORTH, Rev. Michael (1631-1705) of Malden, Mass.

Private diary, July 1659-October 1669; brief, scattered extracts of no particular value; literary and personal affairs.

Hist. Mag. VII (1863) 361-363.

GOFFE, Col. William (ca. 1605-ca. 1679) of Westminster, Eng.

Private diary, March-July 1660 (a brief and pointless extract); social and religious affairs at Boston.

Massachusetts Hist. Soc. Proc. 1st Ser. VII (1863-1864) 280-283.

SPÖRI, Felix Christian (b. 1601?) of Zurich (?), surgeon.

Travel diary, February 1661-February 1664 (extract from second half of journal); voyage from Bermuda to America; detailed account of New England; Rhode Island; whale hunt; voyage to London and Amsterdam. (First part, not published, is of voyage from Amsterdam to Bermuda.) Irregular entries, many apparently post facto. Translated from the German.
